

CHINOOK FUND

◆ CHANGE, NOT CHARITY ◆

The Chinook Fund is committed to the transformation of society into one that promotes social justice and freedom from oppression, including but not limited to: racism, sexism, classism, heterosexism, ageism, and ableism.

2007 ANNUAL REPORT

“It is a more difficult task to acknowledge ourselves as oppressors or the areas in our lives where we carry privilege.”

I have been honored to serve as Chinook’s Board Chair for the past 3 years. These years have afforded me many opportunities to grow as a socially responsible and involved human being. In the past three years, Chinook has grown and changed as a community. Changes for 2007 meant losing our ED, Peg Logan, and staff members, Dani Newsum, Eva Benavides, and Jenny McDonald.

2007 also brought new gifts to our community. Our new ED, Sherelle Hessel offers an incredible gift of new direction and leadership. Katie Kranz, Neha Mahajan, Nicole Molina and Ruth Zerezghi, all bring a freshness, compassion and competence that will lead us towards a deeper connection in the communities we serve. We also welcomed several new volunteers to serve on the grantmaking, development, finance, nomination and executive committees.

Chinook has taken on the task of working with racism, gender identity, heterosexism and is only beginning to have the conversations of challenging our tendencies towards classism. This might look like examining ourselves about who gets invited into our community, who does or doesn’t apply for funding, who we fund, where and when we hold our meetings, and to whom we extend our hands to for support.

As we took on this commitment, we looked for our complacencies and blinders when confronting our own internal and external oppressions. It has always been easy to identify with the oppressions we live with daily. It is a more difficult task to acknowledge ourselves as oppressors or the areas in our lives where we carry privilege. Integrity requires us to examine the way we function as oppressor; because, we cannot expect anyone else to be aligned with our values if we are not. Acknowledging our privileges and oppressions does not imply a transformation. It only means that we are now aware of work yet to be done. As individuals and as a community, we have much work to do.

I welcome the new year, our new staff, our new community members and our new Board Chair, Jesse King with all the hopes of leading us into new horizons, goals, strategies, continued growth and commitment to being part of the dream that creates a free and just society.

Malaika Pettigrew
Board Chair, 2004- 2007

“Supporting communities, developing leadership, promoting change.”

During seasons of transition there is always the feeling of anxiousness about what’s to come, what will change, will anything remain the same....Well a lot of things have changed at Chinook. If you stop by our office you’ll notice that staff is predominantly new, the office décor has changed, some new volunteers are hanging around, and our focus on anti-oppression has gone to a deeper level including challenging how we operate internally and broadening our community base which invites an even deeper level of accountability. With these new changes comes an enormous feeling of gratitude for the enduring legacy that each community member has given to Chinook whether as a staff person, volunteer, donor, or grantee. I appreciate so much the foundation of trust and community that has already been laid for this new visioning of Chinook.

What you will also notice about Chinook is while many things have changed, some things still remain the same. You’ll find that we are still working on being a vessel for social change that includes providing leadership in the philanthropic community when it comes to operating within a radical anti-oppression framework. You’ll notice we still want our space to be one that is welcoming to all people, which is why you can always stop by and get a smile or a hello or talk with staff about your community perspective. You’ll also notice that while many community members’ roles have changed they are still around supporting us as they always do with a historical perspective that is priceless for the new “Chinookies” especially when it comes to supporting staff in organizing our 20th year celebration which is sure to be the most coveted event of the year! These things remain the same because we feel this is all a part of the work we’ve been called to do.

Our calling also mandates that we garner support from you as we change roles and fulfill our mission to commit to the transformation of society into one that promotes social justice and freedom from oppression, including but not limited to: racism, sexism, classism, heterosexism, ageism, and ableism. And as we approach this upcoming year, our priorities remain simple and clear: support communities, develop leadership, and promote change. How we do this might be a little more challenging, but we are committed to the end result of change and need your support in making that possible. We would love to have you be a part of this transformative organization, not only because we are trying to build an organization that is accountable to community in a way that invites dialogue and respect but also because we are trying to build community relationships that utilizes the vehicle of grant making to change circumstances and gain power.

The capacity to grow and change the way we organize with guiding principles and strategies that are mutually beneficial would offer a legacy of community building and an opportunity to see social change happen for real. This vision can be actualized however daunting the road may be. With your help we can see this vision manifest and watch Colorado change for the better.

In solidarity,

Sherelle Hessel
Executive Director

SOCIAL JUSTICE EDUCATION

The Social Justice Institute educates community activists in lower income neighborhoods on how to more effectively organize people to change the economic, legal, political, educational and social systems that impact their lives. Participants also learn to identify, understand and transcend forms of racism, sexism, heterosexism, ableism and classism that divide people who should be working together.

The Social Justice Awareness program works with non-profit and community organizations who seek to transform their environment into one that promotes inclusion, challenges oppression, and responds to diverse communities. Principles of anti-oppression, social justice and organizational development work are tailored to meet the specific needs of organizations committed to institutional change.

Social Justice Institute participants!

I really like the activist controlled grant making of Chinook Fund. I know that when I donate to Chinook Fund that a group of thoughtful activists will be carefully considering and evaluating how best to leverage my donation across a group of diverse social justice organizations. The individuals who make the funding decisions are community organizers themselves; they know the issues and make wise and informed funding decisions.

-Christine Allison

GRANTMAKING

Grantees

As a foundation, the Chinook Fund stands out in its grantmaking process and the organizations it funds. Since 1987, we have supported the work of grassroots organizations fighting for progressive social change in Colorado. The Chinook Fund often works with groups that are too new, too risky or too radical to receive funding from more mainstream sources. Our grantees do work that is centered in communities most affected by a problem, and are led by people who will be most impacted by its solution. They fight to alter social and economic relationships/institutions which are unjust, inequitable, and undemocratic. The Chinook Fund also believes that oppression and privilege are at the root of most social issues. In order to be effective, progressive organizing must directly address issues of race, class, gender, culture, sexual orientation, age and ability/disability in the work.

Overall, we believe that it is this constituent-led, systems-changing and anti-oppression approach that gives people and communities the power to transform their lives and the society we all live in. In 2007, our grantees received $130,000 to continue working on the front lines of immigrant justice, reproductive rights, affordable housing, environmental justice, labor, disability rights, racial justice, and more. It is our honor to support their efforts!

Grantee Celebration!

GRANTMAKING

Process

Our process of grantmaking is also unique. Rather than have staff and donors exclusively determine where money is spent, the Chinook Fund gives decision-making power to people who have worked on the ground for social change. A committee of activists and community representatives who reflect the diverse backgrounds of our grantees convenes every fall and spring to review grants, site visit organizations and allocate funds. A consensus-based process allows for collective insight and democratic decision-making. With these practices, the Chinook Fund strives to be increasingly accountable to the communities in which our grantees do work.

For complete instructions on proposal content and format, consult the Chinook Fund's funding guidelines or visit www.chinookfund.org.

Types of Chinook Funding

The Start-up Fund

Created to support organizations just beginning their work. Organizations or groups must have been in existence for 4 years or less and can be funded only twice in the start-up category, not necessarily in consecutive years.

The Established Fund

Supports groups that have been working successfully on social justice issues for a number of years.

Technical Assistance (TA) Grants

Funded groups are eligible to also apply for TA grants to build their skills and sustainable infrastructures for their organizations.

Critical Response Grants

Created to enable groups to respond to unforeseen or developing public events. They are not to alleviate financial difficulties. Please call the Chinook Fund for more information.

Volunteers engage in continuous anti-oppression work at the Chinook Fund.

They strive to challenge themselves and develop their political analysis!

I volunteered for and give to the Chinook Fund because it was the first time I found an organization and a community where we were not only challenging other organizations to acknowledge and address systemic and institutionalized oppression but also authentically challenging ourselves to evaluate how we function within and contribute to a system that is inherently oppressive. This is a truly unique organization and I will continue to support them despite the fact that I no longer live in Colorado. My experience with this organization has changed my life.

Interested in being a volunteer and engaging in the Chinook Fund's anti-oppression work? Check out the following volunteer opportunities and sign-up at www.chinookfund.org!

Development Committee

The development committee is responsible for advising and oversight of overall direction for development and fundraising for the Chinook Fund; involvement in brainstorming creative new directions, motivating the Board to be involved in fundraising efforts.

Executive Committee

The Executive Committee (EC) is composed of the officers of the Chinook Fund Board of Directors and the Executive Director of the Chinook Fund. The EC is responsible for the overall management and longer-range planning of the fund and for the integration of the work of the various Board committees. The EC has the authority to act on behalf of the Board between Board meetings, except as set forth in the Bylaws. The EC evaluates the performance of the Executive Director and ensures the fiscal responsibility and health of the Chinook Fund. These responsibilities are carried out in the context of EC meetings and established procedures. EC members should address ideas, concerns and problems about the organization only through the process of the EC, unless expressly authorized otherwise by the Board as a whole.

Finance Committee

The Finance Committee (FC) is responsible for overseeing the fiscal health of the Chinook Fund. It assumes responsibility for planning and directing all fundraising activities, and develops and monitors the budget.

Grantmaking Committee

The Grantmaking Committee (GMC) is responsible for all aspects of grantmaking. The GMC is comprised of at least 2/3 community activists (as opposed to a majority of major donors) and should always have representation from the various communities and issue areas that Chinook funds.

Grantmaking Policy Committee

The Grantmaking Policy Committee is a sub-committee of the Grantmaking Committee and was established in to allow time outside of the regular grant cycles to focus on matters of policy and procedures relating to grantmaking. The Chair must be a member of the GMC and all committee members must be current or past GMC members. The Policy Committee makes recommendations regarding policy and procedures to the GMC.

Investment Committee

The Investment Committee is responsible for overseeing the endowment campaign of the Chinook Fund. The committee assumes responsibility for endowment fundraising, donor visits, investment policy, investment management, and all events and decisions related to the endowment and its campaign.

Nominating Committee

The Nominating Committee (NC) is responsible for soliciting and evaluating applications to the Chinook Fund Board of Directors and committees, and for presenting a slate of nominees for the Executive Committee. It is also responsible for any issues that may arise regarding Board membership.

Program Committee

The Program Committee guides the curriculums, evaluates the effectiveness of our grantmaking efforts, propose different ways to carry out our work in all three areas, develop tools to ensure that our work reaches target groups while remaining accessible and culturally relevant among others.
