OUR VALUES

As we do our work, we are guided by the following values:

LIBERATION

In our words and actions, we honor the inherent dignity, strength, and wisdom of the individual and the collective. We actively challenge practices that dehumanize and isolate people and cultivate practices that bring people together across our differences to achieve community-led, systemic change, justice, and peace. We believe everyone has a role to play in collective liberation.

INTEGRITY

We are honest, accessible, and transparent in our work, and advocate for the same in our partner organizations and in the field of philanthropy. We understand the power and responsibility that comes with being a steward of financial resources and are accountable to our constituents.

COMMUNITY

We build caring, respectful relationships with one another. Recognizing our interdependence, we are committed to action that moves us all closer to our vision of liberation, connection, and abundance. We honor our relationship with the natural world, which sustains us all.

LEADERSHIP

We encourage learning, experimentation, and innovative thinking, as well as support the development of grassroots leaders. We embrace our role as leaders in the movement for social justice philanthropy and are willing to take strategic risks in service of our vision of abundantly resourced movements.

LETTER FROM OUR EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR

Dear Chinook Fund Community,

I became Chinook Fund's Executive Director in April 2018, poised to take the organization to the next level and move Chinook further toward our mission to seed community-led, systemic change by mobilizing resources for and trusting in grassroots social justice organizations across Colorado. At the time, we had a staff of two full-time employees, a Board of five, and were still in the early stages of our shift to the Giving Project model of donor organizing and community-led grantmaking.

I write this letter to the Chinook community in January 2022, feeling struck by the tremendous growth and change this organization has experienced and embraced during this time.

In just three years, we've doubled our staff to six, exponentially increased grantmaking distributing $526,000 to 80 organizations, and doubled our donor base to over 1,000 — the most grant dollars and donors in our 34-year history!

In 2021, we moved 108 grants to groups across Colorado. Honoring our racial justice commitment, 90 percent of grantee groups were led by Black, Indigenous, and other communities of color. Answering calls to action from groups like the Decolonizing Wealth Project, we leveraged our endowment to invest in Oweesta, the Longmont-based and longest-standing Native Community Development Financial Institution serving Native CDFIs and Native communities across the country.

LETTER FROM OUR EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR

We also bid farewell to Jess Nelson and S. Juliette Lee, two incredible staff members who played key roles in implementing our Giving Project model, increasing our grantmaking, and incorporating joy & fun into our work. We welcomed an inspiring cohort of six new BIPOC Board members, including several grantee leaders and Giving Project alumni, bringing our Board to eleven members. We leaned on leaders within our community to carry us through the staffing changes and recruited incoming staff members from our Giving Project and grantee community.

While we navigate these changes and celebrate our growth, experiencing incredible milestones, we also collectively hold and care for each other through the grief of an ongoing global pandemic, rise in political and white supremacist violence, escalating climate catastrophes, and the growing racial wealth divide.

Protecting and nourishing seeds of hope during these times is perhaps one of the most powerful forms of resistance. On the days when hope feels out of reach, I return to the wise words of bell hooks: “Hope is essential to any political struggle for radical change when the overall social climate promotes disillusionment and despair.”

I reflect on the powerful question from my dear friend, Michelle Castor: “Who benefits from our doubt, courage, worries, hope, or complacency about the future?!” These words help bring me back to the moment and to the beauty of what’s possible when we build and flex community power. These words remind me that living and taking action rooted in courage and hope are beautiful acts of resistance.

LETTER FROM OUR EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR

I see the beauty of what is possible when I look to our grantees across Colorado who are cultivating communities of care and building grassroots power:

- Pine River Shares, based in Southwestern Colorado, expanded their mutual aid program providing over $15,000 in economic relief and increasing food security by building a 2,000 square foot garden and dome to grow food year-round.
- Apprentice of Peace Youth Organization, based in Denver, held courageous conversations and took collective action to break mental health stigma and address a rise in violence impacting young people.
- El Alba Cooperative, an Aurora-based worker-owned cooperative, paused their plans to purchase a commissary kitchen opting instead to support catering entrepreneurs by acquiring a food truck. They continue to make moves to support community wealth building and economic stability for immigrant and refugee communities.

Showing up with love and courage, Giving Project donor organizers raised an astounding average of $4,300 per member in 2021! Collectively, they mobilized over 1,000 donors to fund $370,000 in Fall and Spring grant awards, including $100,000 in multiyear grant awards to be disbursed over the next year. We deepened our partnership with Transformative Leadership for Change through the Another World is Possible Fund, expanding the vision to fund resilience across the social justice ecosystem, distributing $256,000 in “Resilience” grants reaching 52 groups.

LETTER FROM OUR EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR

I believe now more than ever, we must nourish seeds of hope and fund movements like our lives depend on it, because they do. Let us imagine and build the more just and beautiful world we know is possible.

In solidarity,

Crystal Middlestadt

FAREWELL TO JESS & JULIETTE

This past Spring, we bid farewell to Jess Nelson and Juliette Lee, our two longest-serving staff. Each has contributed immensely to our growth over the past 8 and 5 years, respectively. Jess initiated and led the project to move Chinook Fund to an integrated database for accounting, donation management, and an online grants portal. Juliette's leadership has been instrumental in strengthening the Giving Project as she directed eight Giving Projects and one Alumni Grant Making Committee supporting 144 members to collectively raise $826,620 from 2,494 donors!

While it's a bittersweet time for me and our team, I am truly honored to have worked alongside such dedicated, brilliant, and authentic leaders. Please join me in wishing Jess and Juliette a fond farewell.

The Giving Project is an innovative program for leadership development and social justice philanthropy. Over 6 months, we work closely with a diverse group of 25 people from all income levels who are passionate about social justice and want to strengthen their skills in fundraising, grantmaking, and grassroots organizing. They develop a shared analysis of race, class, and power within society, make a personal donation of an amount that is meaningful to them, then collectively raise and grant money to grassroots organizations working for social change in Colorado.

Giving Projects have been especially successful at reaching traditionally underrepresented communities, including young people and BIPOC leaders, in Colorado and throughout the US. We are proud to collaborate with 10 other community foundations across the country to develop this innovative model for social justice philanthropy and donor organizing.

LETTER FROM JUDITH MÁRQUEZ, CHINOOK FUND GRANTS MANAGER

The Another World is Possible Fund is a vehicle to invest in the social justice organizations who are fighting for both a just response to COVID-19 in the short term AND a visionary future for our world in the long term. The fund was launched in May 2020 through an innovative partnership with Transformative Leadership for Change (TLC). TLC is a new initiative that supports the sustainability, healing, solidarity, and radical visions of BIPOC people leading social justice organizations.

In the second year of the fund, we focused on the resiliency of grassroots leaders, organizations, and communities. The fund continues to be a vehicle to provide rapid response dollars for crisis and emergent situations, but our team felt it was critical to expand the vision to include funding for ALL the ways communities build resilience across the social justice ecosystem through rest, joy, celebration, collaboration, solidarity, restorative & transformative justice, community care, storytelling/reclaiming narratives, healing, grieving, visioning – and more.

As an AWIPF grantmaking committee member, the vision of this fund has truly inspired me to dream about what is possible. From recognizing that the pandemic was an opportunity to support the deep radical work needed in our communities, to working in a committee with long-time organizers, movement leaders, and friends. Our AWIPF committee supported each other through the pandemic as organizations adapted to respond and as we personally navigated healing, grief, growth, and change in our own lives.

This fund also lifted Chinook Fund and TLC's profile in Colorado's philanthropic sector thanks to our long history of supporting BIPOC leadership and TLC's centering and expansion of BIPOC leadership. This enabled us to advocate for increased funding for our shared networks.

In 2022, I can't wait for all the possibilities that this fund will create in our communities, in Colorado, and our world. Because Another World is Possible!

NATIONAL GIVING PROJECT NETWORK

Chinook Fund is a proud member of the growing National Giving Project Network (GPN). This network has grown and evolved since 2014, as funds across the country have replicated the Giving Project model originally developed by Social Justice Fund Northwest. Through monthly calls and retreats, we innovate, adapt, and collectively strengthen the model.

Anti-Oppression; Arts/Culture/Media

IDEA Stages understands that artists and culture-makers have a crucial role in creating the world we are all aching to see. Cultural Organizing connects creative practices and organizing techniques; working to amplify access in all spaces. Their vision is a not-so-distant future where people see important and vital parts of who they are reflected in stories, on stages, behind the scenes, and sitting next to them in the audience. It is their hope that diversity and access become living, breathing experiences, born of how theater-makers work in collaboration to meet more important, human needs that reach beyond entertainment value.

Food Justice

Kaizen Food Rescue, founded by Thai Nguyen, a Fall 2019 Giving Project alumni, is an example of the impact constituent-led work can have in a community. As a Vietnamese refugee, Thai experienced food insecurity first-hand and wanted to change the way we think about food justice and ending food waste. Leaders at Kaizen Food Rescue are actively rewriting the narrative for their communities while fighting for Food Sovereignty, wherein people have access to healthy and culturally relevant food as well as labor rights for agricultural workers. Kaizen's viewpoint is not disseminated through a lens of whiteness, as traditional food pantries are, because cultural food history is important to and provides dignity for those who pick up free fresh groceries. Kaizen has a power-sharing collaboration with community members affected by food insecurity where impacted voices are uplifted in a safe space and we co-create programs "for the people by the people."

The Alliance aims to be one spot to share and to stay connected. They actively organize around issues impacting the Indigenous community, host cross-tribal teachings, share lessons learned, and care for each other, children, and elders, keeping their community visible, relevant, and united.

GRANTMAKING IMPACT

2012 – 2021

INVESTING IN BLACK, INDIGENOUS & PEOPLE OF COLOR-LED MOVEMENTS

Chinook Fund believes communities are best equipped to solve the challenges they face. By trusting grassroots leadership and providing funding to groups led by and for communities impacted by injustice, we support Colorado's movements for social justice.

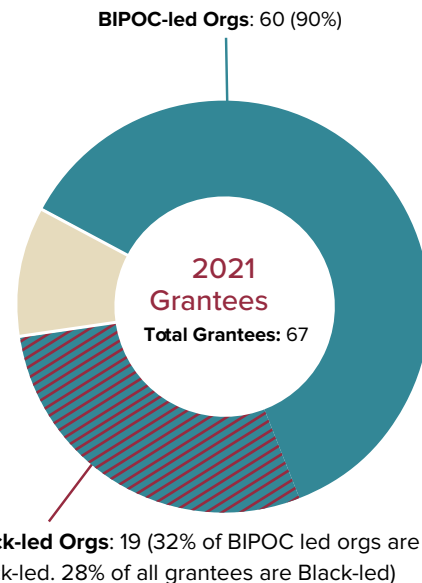

CORE FUNDING CRITERIA

Constituent-Led The work is led by the people most impacted by injustice.

Community-Wide The work reflects all members of the constituency, especially those who experience multiple forms of oppression.

Lasting Effect The work makes change not just for one individual today, but for the community as a whole, and for future generations.

Chinook Fund prioritizes funding BIPOC groups as part of our commitment to racial justice; such groups are chronically underfunded and under-resourced. In the Giving Project model, our racial justice framework centers Black liberation and Indigenous sovereignty given the realities that all wealth in the U.S. is built on stolen land and stolen labor. We are proud to support so many emerging and established BIPOC-led groups organizing for justice.
